You can borrow a SOLIDWORKS license, to use the software remotely.

You must connect to the same network and license server to borrow a license, but not necessarily to use it. The borrowed licenses are valid only for the system on which they are borrowed. They can not be transferred.

2. In the License Borrowing tab:
   a. Select a date in the "Borrow Until" field.
   b. Select the products to borrow, then click "Borrow" and "Yes" to confirm.
   c. Click "Refresh". The "Expiration Date" column indicates the date on which licenses must be returned.

3. Click "OK".

To run SOLIDWORKS, you must borrow a SOLIDWORKS license. SOLIDWORKS Professional and SOLIDWORKS Premium enable only add-ons associated with the suite, not the SOLIDWORKS application.

To return a borrowed license:

1. In Windows click Start, All Programs, SOLIDWORKS <version>, SOLIDWORKS Tools, Solidnetwork License Manager Client <version>.

2. In the License Borrowing tab:

   b. Click "Refresh". The "Expiration Date" column is empty, indicating that the licenses have been returned.

There is no need to license after the expiration date. At midnight on the day of the expiration date, the license returns to the license group on the SNL server and applications can no longer be run on the remote system.
